Here are the questions and answers in Spanish, followed by their English translations: ### 1. ¿Hay ... muñeco en la fotografía? Translation: Is there any manikin in the picture? Answer: algún Translation: any (used for singular, masculine nouns when asking about the existence of something, in this case, "muñeco") ### 2. ¿Hay ... muñeco en la fotografía? Translation: Is there any manikin in the picture? Answer: algún ... ningún Translation: any ... none (The response "No, no hay ningún muñeco" means "No, there is no manikin.") ### 3. ¿Cuánto arroz hay en el plato? Translation: How much rice is there on the plate? Answer: alguno Translation: some (This is the incorrect answer in this context. "Alguno" refers to a specific thing, while "mucho," "bastante," or "algo" are better choices for "how much.") ### 4. ¿Tienes ganas de irte de vacaciones? Translation: Do you feel like going on vacation? Answer: muchas Translation: many (Used for plural, feminine nouns, referring to "ganas" here, which is feminine and plural)

Explanation:

- Algún/alguno: Used for singular, masculine nouns when asking about the existence of something. - Ningún/ninguno: Used for singular,
- masculine nouns to indicate the absence of something. - Mucho/mucha: Used for a large
- quantity (much, many) of both countable and uncountable nouns. - Bastante: Means quite a lot,
- enough, or sufficient.
- Algo: Means something or anything, often used with uncountable nouns.

Let me know if you need more clarification!

